

"Free-Money Man" Proves There is Free Money for Everybody!

Matthew Lesko, New York Times Best-Selling Author, passed a lie detector test proving the New York Consumer Protection Board was "flat wrong" in their report that he is lying about free government programs.

The test was conducted by Dr. Ed Gelb, one of the country's most respected lie detector experts, and broadcast on PAX TV's Lie Detector Show.

Americans Deserve the Truth

Lesko challenges the New York Consumer Protection Board to take a lie detector test to show Americans that it is their knowledge of government money programs that is wrong.

Although the Consumer Protection Board has ZERO unresolved consumer complaints regarding the millions of books that Lesko has sold, their false claims about Lesko and free government money are actually hurting consumers by discouraging them from taking advantage of the free money programs that Americans are entitled to.

More Free Money Than Ever Before

The Board is telling consumers that there is very little free money available to consumers based on a call to the U.S. Office of Management and Budget that told them most grant money, about $250 billion, goes to state and local governments and non-profit organizations.

What the Board did not know is that 80% of the government's free money programs, about $1 trillion, are not called "grants" but are called "direct payments" and all this money goes directly to consumers. If consumers call back and ask the right question, they will get the right answer and see that the Board is wrong.

Not Welfare Money

The Board claims the programs Lesko talks about are basically welfare programs and do not apply to the average person. When, in fact, studies show that only 12% of government money goes to the low-income people and 75% of all government money programs have no income requirements at all.

Using the term "welfare" also discourages eligible people from taking advantage of needed help, because by government standards a low-income family of 4 making up to $38,000 can take advantage of what they are calling "welfare" programs.

And if the programs are only for the poor, why does government data show:

- Seniors making over $150,000 are getting more free government money than seniors making $15,000, and
- Families making over $100,000 are getting more government money for college than families making less than $100,000.

49 Million Eligible for Free Money

The Board makes an unsubstantiated claim that most people know what programs they are eligible for or that it is easy to find out from existing government sources. This flies in the face of documented government documents that show up to 34% of the people who call in about programs which they are eligible for get the wrong information.

Government data shows over 49 million consumers can call the government today and get free money and help...if they only knew they were eligible. This includes:

- 4 million senior citizens don't know they can get up to $1,000
- 6 million families don't know they can get free health insurance for their children
- 10 million families don't know they can get up to $4,000 to pay food bills
- 800,000 college students don't know they can get grants of up to $4,050
- Single mothers don't know they can tap into $673 million in unclaimed child support payments
- 29 million seniors citizens don't know that they are eligible for free medical procedures like colonoscopies, bone mass measurements, prostate exams and glaucoma tests through Medicare
- Millions more don't know they can get money to pay for mortgages, phone bills, student loans, credit card debt and more

Free Money Programs for Everybody

Consumers have a right to not be misled by one government office that is trying to discourage them from taking advantage of government money programs. Especially when other government offices are spending millions of dollars trying to get money to the people who are eligible.

Thousands of programs are enacted into law and the dollar amount keeps growing every year no matter who is in office. Yes, as Lesko has shown, there is free money and it can be yours by asking for it.

Save Yourself 2,000 Hours of Research

Sure, all this information is in the public domain and available to anyone. But you can save yourself over 2,000 hours of research, because that's how long it takes Lesko's researchers to collect it.

Just Fill in the Blanks

Not only is the government willing to give you free money, they will help you apply for it for free! Over 90% of all the applications are just "fill in the blanks" forms to fill out. If you find an application that is more complicated, there are GOVERNMENT OFFICES THAT WILL HELP YOU FILL OUT THE FORMS FOR FREE.

World's Leading Expert on Free Money

Lesko has written over 100 books on the subject and has two New York Times Best Sellers. His books have been chosen Best Reference Book of the Year by the American Library Association and the Library Journal.

Lesko was a columnist for the New York Times Syndicate, Good Housekeeping Magazine, the Chicago Tribune and others. He has appeared on hundreds of TV and radio shows including Larry King, David Letterman, Good Morning America, Oprah, Jay Leno and many others.

For the Rich, Poor and You!

Some of these programs are for low-income families living on less than $38,000 per year, but 75% of all government money programs HAVE NO INCOME REQUIREMENT AT ALL. Millionaires are even eligible. Rich, poor, good credit or bad, there's free government money for everyone.
